

Stories of

Eve Gordon-Ramek

When I was young, we lost one-third of the world's Jewish population to the Holocaust. Those of us in our Jewish community knew we had an obligation to ensure its long-term survival.

I am proud to have joined the L'Dor V'Dor Society at CCJDS through a planned bequest because I see the school as a bulwark against assimilation and apathy. Too many youth are dropping away, with loose ties to their Judaism. CCJDS helps students to realize their future as leaders of the Jewish community. I have seen firsthand how they combine a strong Judaic focus with the highest quality of academics.

Through my support of CCJDS, I see that future generations will grow up more closely bonded with their Jewish community. This is the legacy I choose to leave.
